Attainment of a Certificate of Professional Competence (CPC) is a prerequisite for any individual or company who wishes to obtain a Standard National or International Operators ('O') Licence to run vehicles exceeding 3.5 tonnes gross vehicle weight (or 1525 kg unladen weight) for 'hire and reward' within the UK and / or Europe. It should also be noted that, in order to run both Road Haulage and Passenger Transport Operations, the delegate will need to obtain both CPC's. The two are mutually exclusive.

At least one person in the organisation – usually the Transport Manager is required to be Professionally Competent. There are a number of routes accepted by the Traffic Commissioner, but the most comprehensive is by examination. The CPC is an NVQ Level 3 qualification – which is considered to be an Advanced Level qualification – administered by the OCR Examination Board. See www.ocr.org.uk for more information.

The CPC series of exams is made up of individual 'stand-alone' modules. The Road Haulage qualification requires the candidate to pass two, two hour exams.

- R1 60 multiple choice questions.
- R2 6 questions requiring written answers based on a case study – this is an open book exam meaning that candidates may use their notes during this paper.

Passing either paper will result in a credit being awarded by the OCR examinations board. There is currently no time limit for candidates to complete the qualification. It is however, necessary to pass both papers to gain recognition as a holder of a CPC in this discipline.

Also note that it is not possible to sit the Road Haulage and Passenger Transport exams at the same sitting as the exams run concurrently.

The exams run four times per annum, usually on the first Friday in March, June, September and December
